Supreme Court Resolution.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15 .- Resolutions adopted by the bar of the Supreme on the death of Justice Samuel Miller were to-day presented to the Court, and brief remarks were made in eulogy two trips to the grounds to accommoof the deceased. In presenting the date all who wish to rttend. resolutions, Attorney-General Miller

"When Justice Miller ascended the bench a political earthquake was shaking the foundation of the Government, obliterating old landmarks. To safely guide this, the weakest and most sensative branch of the government, through all the troubelous times that followed, so that on the one hand, no just power of the general government should be the last, and on the other, that no just right of a State or of a citizen should be sacrificed, was a task worthy of the best efforts of the greatest of jurists, and most worthily has the task been done."

Chief Justice Fuller, who responded, paid a high tribute to the dead Justice. The resolutions were then ordered spread on the minutes of the Court.

THE STAR ROUTE SERVICE.

How Contract Jobbers Operate in Washington.

The following Washington dispatch shows the system by which unprincipled men "make" money out of the Star Route mail contract, and, as Nevada has suffered as much by this method of procedure as any State in the Union, it is given to the public:

The old proverb about giving a dog a bad name is daily exemplified in the postal service of the United States in the persistency with which an order of uncleanliness seems to hang in the popular mind about the phrase "Star route." Because jobbery and corruption of the most monstrous sort in the mode of letting and changing contracts were unearthed by the investigations undertaken during President Garfield's term, the name itself has be-come unsavory, and a whole system suffers because a handful of unscrupulous tricksters made use of a part of its machinery for 2 bad end.

Although there is no reason now to Parnell.

Rev. O'Reagan, Dean of the Chapter at Cloyne, to-day called a meeting, at scandal, if any one in Congress would take the trouble to set an investigation on foot. A little knot of contract-gamblers, gathered here in Washington, make a practice of bidding in about every competition. These men never owned a mail stage or drove one. They have no interest, domic Parnell the supporters of Parnell turned out in force. They passed a resolution supporting their leader.

They passed a country traversed by the routes on which they bid. Their entire stock in trade consists of a modest bank account, a few convenient acquaintances ready to serve as bondsmen if required, a set of post-road maps and specifications, and a record of the figof the best rontes among them, they proceed to sublet their contracts at highly profitable rates to somebody on the ground. Two results thus come about: First, live competition is discouraged; the aspirants at home reach the conclusion that there is no use in diste purchase of thirteen million dollers worth of surplus silver bullion. The Secretary promised to send the Committee a draft of a bill to carry out his views. The Republican Caucus Committee has reached an agreement which will take the shape of a bill providing for the purchase of a surplus of silver bullion, estimated at twelve million dollars' worth, and issue one hundred million dollars of two per cent. bonds to purchase silver bullion from time to time to make good the retirement of the national bank circulation, and a recoinage of trade dollars.

THE GAZETTE prints in another column a copy of a Washington dispatch to the New York Evening Post, which is of vital interest to many of the people of the State. It is a well-known fact that about all of the mail contracts which require transrortation by stage and are known generally under the name of "star routes" are secured by the very class of men, all nonresidents, described by the Post's article, and at such low figures that our people get in consequence the poorest kind of service. Usually these non-resident contractors sublet it to our own citizens at rates much below the actual cost of the service, who are thereby obliged to depend upon what little passenger traffic there is to get even. United States as to confine the letting of mail contracts within any one State to the citizens of that State. Whether such legislation would be legal or otherwise we are not prepared to say, but the subject is one of mus importance to Nevada. A memorial on the subject to Congress from our Legislature might be productive of great good.

THEY do some things better in England than in the United States. Some six weeks ago the body of a woman was found in London, and it was at first supposed that "Jack the Ripper" had claimed another victim. Later it appeared probable that the woman had been murdered by a mistress of her husband. There was an investigation, an arrest and trial, and ten days ago the guilty woman was sentenced to be hanged. This would have been a six months' or a year's case in the United States.

It is reported that the Manningham Plush Mills in England have reduced wages 25 per cent. on account of the McKinley bill. Already companies have been formed for the manufacture of plush in the United States. Of course we are sorry to see any reduction in the wages of English operatives, but we are trying to make wages for the American workingmen. How comes it, by the way, that English wages are thus reduced if the American consumer pays the tariff tax?

THE woman suffragists of South Dakota polled a good vote in favor of the Constitutional amendment giving women the right of suffrage-19,113. But the opponents of the measure got there with 85,108 votes.

Joy Company, in proof of the curative properti of Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla, offered to submit it to the terrific test of "no cure no pay." Many accepted, and their experiences are so convincing as to be almost beyond belief. Here is another, written under date January 6, 1890: -

ELA VERSUS COYOTE.

Strange Fight Witnessed in a San Francisco Park.

How Old Pete Rescued a Doe from the Jaws of a Marauder-Hard Battling Between Unlike Foes-Victory on the Right Side,

Pete, the big elk out in the park, says the San Francisco Examiner, distinguished himself the other night. Notwithstanding Pete's long residence among civilization, he is always savage at this period of the year. For a week or more he has been as full of fight as a candidate is of promises. Nor is P te particular as to the charac ter or quality of his combat. As long as it is a fight he is satisfied. He has tried to stir up a muss with some of the deer that share the inclosure with him and his family, but though they have some lively battles among themselves they evidently consider that Pete is the John L. Sullivan of the crowd and pay no attention to his challenges. Nor can he force them to a fight. Whenever he harges on them the bucks dodge him in he brush, and, owing to their lesser bulk, easily avoid him. Pete's longegged offspring, born some months ago, has rather a bard time of it these days. out he hides himself among the bushes and so evades his parent's irritation.

Up to night before last the best fight that Pete could get up was with one of the fence posts. He butted and pawed awa at this until it looked as if he'd sma is the fence. Fortunately the big tail buck showed up and took attention from the post, and by the time he had chased the buck three or four times around the paddock, Pete orgetten about the post.

But night before last Pete got a chance and showed what was in him. Though he is out of temper with his family, and indeed all the other tenants of the leer pallock, he nevertheless considers If their guardian and will always rely resent an attack on even his long-lowed son.

Per was standing in the moonlight at the eastern end of the paddock when a little doe away off at the other end of the inclosure gave a loud bleat of alarm. One of the park policemen saw her sprin; out of the brush, and to his astonishment observed that a covote was Luging to her throat. He started to her as fast as he could, but Pete was ahead of him.

The elk gave one loud answering call, a sound between the roar of a bull and the bas of a goat, with more of the roar than the baa in it, and then tore off to the rescue of the doe. According to the one spectator, Pete laid his horns over against his back and hardly seemed to touch the ground after the first jump. The coyote held on to the loe's throat until Pete was within a lozen yards of him. Then he let go and started for the fence. He reached the palings, but could not get through, and he now thoroughly enraged elk overimazing swiftness, Pete brought his sharp hoofs down squarely on the in-truder's back. It must have broken the byote's spine, for he made no further mpeta scape, but lay there strug ling, yelping and snapping. He got one hold on Pete's fore leg, but the elk got his big horns to reinforce his hoof, and after some very lively thrashing around he broke the coyote's hold. Then Pete went in to finish his adversary. Hoofs and horns worked so quickly that the policeman's eyes could not follow them. Once Pete raised the prowler clean off the ground with his antlers and tossed him ten feet in the air. But the crippled coyote was no coward, for a wonder. He lighted fighting, and somehow got a grip on Pete's haunch. Then there was lively work. The covote was safe from Pete's antlers, but the big elk had his kicking apparatus very handy, and it was no time at all before he had knocked the coyote off him and sent him rolling down the slope to the middle of the paddock. Then the fight was finished.

Peter gave two bounds down the slope and landed, all four feet together, on the hapless covote.

That probably killed the marauder, but Pete by no means let up. He pawed and kicked and gored the body until it was cut to pieces. It was half an hour before the big elk quit mauling the carcass.

When he did he simply sounded another challenge, of which there were, of course, no takers, and then stalked haughtily around the paddock making bluffs at the bucks.

How the coyote got into the paddock is a mystery. No break was to be found in the fence, and it was evident that he could not get out when the big elk charged him.

There has occasionally been seen about the park an old weather-beaten coyote, that ordinarily kept well away from the more traveled localities, though he has been seen at night drinking from the water-trough. This is supposed to be the victim of Pete's hoofs horns. The doe that was attacked is a small, weakly creature, the feeblest in the paddock. The coyote doubtless made a snap for its throat but only caught the skin. These animals kill sheep by cutting the arteries in the neck and drinking the blood until the sheep is dead, and the covote thought that in the absence of mutton venison would not be bad.

An Interesting Meeting Held Saturday Afternoon.

The Nevada State Board of Trade held its regular monthly meeting at the rooms of the First National Bank

c. D. Van Duzer read a very more esting report as the result of his labors subject.

The Manager reported having made the week to the new C. D. Van Duzer read a very intertion, and showed conclusively that one could be maintained on the Meadows at a profit to the farmers and stockholders as well.

Mr. Foley reported that he interviewed Governor Stanford on his way East recently, and called his attention to the great possibilities of Washoe county if a canal were constructed to carry water to Lemmon, Prosser, Warm Springs and Spanish Springs valleys, The Governor asked him what such an enterprise would cost, and was informed that $500,000 would do the work. Governor Stanford remarked that that was no money at all to reclaim a country so rich in agricultural resources. Mr. Foley asked the Governor if he would be willing to invest in an enterprise of the kind, and was informed that he would gladly put money into the scheme. The Governor expressed himself as willing to aid Nevada in any way possible in her laudable undertaking, and said be stood ready to put money into reclamation works.

On motion of W. O. H. Martin, the Secretary was instructed to write Serator John P. Jones and invite him to name a day that be could meet with the Board and discuss Nevada's needs.

On motion of Mr. Martin, the Secretary was ordered to send out notices to all members of the Board, notifying them of the annual meeting to be held on the second Saturday in January, and requesting them to be present.

The Manager reported that at the request of E. P. Lovejoy of Wabuska he had made an investigation of the beet sugar business, and had forwarded a number of papers on the subject. Mr. Lovelov said in his let-ter that the soil in Mason valley contained lime in the form of shells, and all the ingredients necessary for the culture of the sugar beet, and that if works could be built for $40,000 or $50,000, the citizens were prepared to go into the business. Investigations show that the greatest economy is obtained by works capable of handling not less than 350 tons a day. Such works are being erected now in Utah and in Colorado under the supervision of E. H. Dyer of Alvarado, Col., who has made a great success with his works there. It costs at the rate of $1,000 for each ton capacity, making $350,000 invested to get the plant started. Mr. Dyer says he will come to Nevada and look over the field without charge except for traveling expenses. He thinks Nevada is as good a country as Utah for the beet, and that is an extra good place. He says any soil that will bear good pota-toes will grow beets. The Utah plant will make sugar for 33 cents a pound. are as

It would require 3,000 acres of land planted each year to supply a factory. Each acre of beets will make 4,000 pounds of sugar, worth $280. An acre of wheat will produce about a ton of grain on the average in Nevada, worth say $35 a ton, showing a difference in favor of the beet of $245, which will allow wages for a good many men and profit besides to the producer and refiner.

The average yield of an aere in good soil is 20 tons, worth say $90; the co-t of preparing land and seeding, about $7; seed per acre, $2 50; hauling beets to factory, say $1 per ton, $20; weeding, thinning and digging, $1 50 per ton, $30; total, $59 50; profit, $30 50. an addition to the acreage now de-voted to beets of about 900,000 acres of land and about 300 factories, costing $90,000,000 dollars, distributing annually in all channels of business $200,000,000, which now goes to give labor to foreigners. All this crop must be grown in a belt of country 200 miles wide extending from the condition, and a consultation of the country and the condition of the condition of the country and the condition of th 200 miles wide extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific, 100 miles on

The Manager said this whole plan involved the idea which he had been preaching for 15 years to the people of Nevada. That they must devote their lands to higher uses than raising cow feed before the State could prosper. Almost every man in the country is holding more land than he has the means or laborers to handle. He said the none be studied the sugar business the more convincing was the evidence that the only way it could succeed in Nevada was by locating works at some central point where there would be rapid and cheap communication with all parts of the country for the marketing of the product. An abundant supply of pure water is essential, and if water power could behad it would save over $400 a day here. Bone charcoal would be cheap in Nevada if the heaps of skeletons could be gathered off the ranges. It is estimated that Nevada uses seven

The Manager said be was indebted to Albert Gallatin of San Francisco for valuable information and for an introduction to E. H. Dyer of Alvorado, which had been of great service to him.

A number of months ago Mr. New-lands announced that if the Board would recommend a manager for a creamery be would build one and finish it complete for business. A committee was appointed to investigate the matter and report, but no one was willing to devote his time to such the undertaker and of great benefit as a market for hay and mill stuffs. The matter was pressed upon the attention of Mr. Van Duzer, who is thoroughly experienced in the art of making but-a visit during the week to the new discovery of marble in Lovelock stadiscovery of marbie in Lovelock sta-tion in company with A. C. Bragg, Secretary of the Board. Several im-mense ledges of very fine marble, black, white and mottled, and also some onyx beds were found. Also gypsum and other valuable deposits. The resources of Humboldt are wonderful and it will some day be one of the greatest counties in the United States. It is reported that both sul-States. phur and tin can be mined to a profit in places just discovered.

The apple crop has been large and and the mining country of Virginia City, Austin, Eureka, Tuscarora, etc. The price is $1 50 a box or 3 cents a Dealers complain that some orchardists exercise too little care in packing and injure the market immensely putting windfalls, wormy or bruised fruit in the middle of their boxes. Such a thing does every apple grower in Nevada a wrong and will keep the mand down. It has been demonstrated every where and in every business that there can be no su without properly preparing goods for market, and the more care and taste bestowed in that matter the better the Several citizens have made a practice of sending sample boxes of apples to friends or dealers in California, and the result has been to create quite a demand for Nevada apples. No further business appearing the meeting adjourned.

H. M. Frost's Residence Entirely

Consumed. Saturday, as William was passing the residence of H. M. Frost, situated about a mile and a half below town, he discovered that the roof was in a blaze, and he, assisted by James Steel, succeeded in removing most of the household effects on the ground floor. Mr. and Mrs. Frost were in town at the time of the fire and knew nothing of their loss until their home was entirely consumed. The house and furniture was insured for $1,200, which will prove some help toward the erection of another home. The destroyed residence was one of and was one of the strongest structures ever put up on the river. Mr. and Mrs. Frost have the sympathy of everybody, for, besides their clothing and other things, they lost very many keepsakes; which can never be re

Lively Cowboy Has Bee Getting in His Deadly Work on the "Examiner."

Some enterprising cowboy has been giving the Examiner a big fill on the stock situation in Nevada, and it is astonishing that any intelligent man who has any regard for the truth should allow himself to be so imposed upon. The Examiner's "enterprise" has reached a peg or two too far this time. In the first place "S. C. Denwas willing to devote his time to such a venture, although such men as Mr. Gould, Mr. Bryant, Mr. Thompson and others endorsed the idea and believe it could be made profitable to lose, if they had lost every hoof. And again, there never was a livestock raise in the State that ever branded 26,000 calves, or a fifth of 26,000, and the story of John Bradley's stampede is one of the biggest lies that ever was peenned by mortal man. Instead of the loss last winter being 250,000 head, about 100,000 would come nearer the truth: but it makes good reading and shows the Examiner's "enter prise." The GAZETTE reproduces the article to show how easy it is for an ignorant man of the plains to gull a city editor of the "Monarch's" reputation:

Cattlemen in Nevada will remember this year as the worst they ever experience in their business. They were so badly crippled by the havoc wrought by last winters's storms among their herds that they have not yet recovered from the loss, and the business activity of the entire State has been somewhat hampered thereby. More on this account than any other several thousand purchasers of land from the Central Pacific have been given a year's extension on their payments. Of some 4,000 of these rchasers only half a dozen made their usual annual payments.

Recent estimates of the loss of cattle last winter run the number up to 250,000, and examples are numerous where out of a herd of 2,000, three score or less were alive in the spring. This was Mrs. I. M. Strawbridge's experience, while G. W. Crumb saved but 1,750 out of a herd of 10,000. S. C. Denson and Frank Miller lost be-tween 6,000 and 7,000, valued at $100, 000, while others lost so many breeding animals that this summer some anchers branded 1,000 to 1,500 calves, where for several seasons past they were in the habit of branding from 20,000 to 26,000.

A WILD STAMPEDE.

John Bradley was another heavy loser, and he had an experience with some of his cattle that he will never forget. One night 5,000 of his choic est, which had been driven in close to the headquarters of the ranch, when there were between 500 and 1,000 bales of hay stacked together in one bales of hay stacked together in one huge pile, and inclosed by a strong and high board fence, made a wild stampede and took complete possession of the hay. During the day the cattle were given a small quantity of it, the idea being to just keep them from utter starvation and make the hay last as tong as possible. Men armed with sticks and pitchforks were stationed along the outside of the fonce to more along the outside of the fence to mo completely guard the provender, it being anticipated that in their hunger the animals would make an oslaught on the fence to get at the coveted food.

Darkness came on and it was bitter cold. The night was clear, the snow deep on the ground, and ever and anon sharp, piercing winds would mercifully ash, the poor dumb beasts, who, in a solid phalanx on all four sides of the fenced hay, stood a short distance away this process. distance away, shivering in their plight, looking at the hay and watch-

Two hours before midnight the wind increased in fury. It became a hurricane, with the thermometer below Charley Gulling looks happy to-day, and the reason will be plain if you see the Gazette's birth column. and hunger, but with their eyes still fixed on the big pile of hay.

Their restlessness increased; the swaying movement of the big mass became more noticeable. The cattle in the rear, in a vain attempt to get away from the cruel wind, endeavored to get closer to the fence. They struggled wildly, rushing forward and fight-ing to oust those in front, until the whole herd took alarm and began moving toward the hay. Suddenly moving toward the hay. Suddenly with one accord they bellowed loud and long, as if instinct told them death was near, and then in mad career rushed blindly and furiously toward the fence.

A CRITICAL SITUATION.

The guards having no avenue of escape but on top of the pile of hay, swiftly climbed the fence and scram-

The fence gave way, and around and up the pile of hay the herd moved on, so closely packed together that some behind were forced on the backs of those in front, while on the backs of those in front, while here and there were large piles of dead anima s, from the top of which cattle stood frantically grabbing their food, only the next moment to be savagely attacked by others for a favored place.

For an hour the guards on top, with bated breath and frightened looks, watched this wierd sight, and then yells for help, as the cattle pushed one another up close to the top, made Bradley and others, who had run out of the house when the cattle bellowed, think that the guards were being mangled beneath the boofs of the enraged beasts. For two hours they labored to drive the cattle back to rescue the guards, and finally succeeded in getting an opening for them to

"No? It is not a new pattern, but it is very pretty. I have a few more like it, and that is the first one that left my O' the farm-house 'neath the hill, I can see it standing still, standing still,

As I saw it in my childhood's happy days,
When every thing was new and beautiful to view, From morning till the sunset's opal blaze.

I can see the orchard trees, and I hear the hum of bees In the hellyhocks and roses near the wall, And where the brooklet flows, a barefoot urchin

goes Again among the cat-o'-nine-tails tall. Down to the pasture spring I walk, and lightly sing, As happy as in merry days gone by, When I wandered in the wood, half lost in sol itude,

Or climbed the friendly mountain, looming high.

How I love that farm-house wide, with its trees on either side, Where I played, and laughed and wandered when a boy! I can see the swallows fly down the chimney from the sky, And again I dream a dream of vanished joy. Wherever I may go I'll find no place, I know, That will my mind with sweeter fancies fill. Fond memory guard the door, and time pass

A BALANCED ACCOUNT. The Thief's Bill Was Settled with a Neat Check.

The following veritable case of kleptomania came under my observation a few years since, the principal actor in which was the wife of a respectable cit-izen, who resided in a fashionable qu rter of one of our Atlantic cities, ays an ex-attorney in the New York

Weekly. A shrewd and thrifty young client of mine, who kept a fine establishment upon one of the principal dry-goods thoroughfares of the town, retailed laces and similar ladies' furnishing materials, and had a well-selected stock, which attracted a continual run of goodly customers.

From time to time he missed trifling articles from the counters, but could not account for their mysterious disappearance.

He directed his book-keeper to open a fictitious account in his ledger, to which he gave the title of "Thief's Accoun to the debit side of which were charged all articles that were missed-and which were invariably stolen by some person or persons who visited the store. So the 'Thief's Account" was regularly kept up for nearly a year, and a very considerable number of items found their way to the debtor side of it, the aggregate value of which had reached upwards of two hundred dollars, at the close of the first twelve months of my client's business.

But, as yet, no clew had been had to the actual cause of this unprofitable leak, and for a long time—despite the most careful watching of strangers—the ac-count remained open, and increasing, upon the young merchant's books.

One day there entered the store a well-dressed, lady-like person, whom the store-keeper knew by name, for she had been there before—who bought some trifling articles—and while waiting for the parcel to be made up, the merchant—who stood a short distance from her-observed a small but valuable lace collar slipped from the counter, where there were several paper-boxes of goods open, and though he was greatly astonished and could scarcely credit it, yet he was satisfied that this lady had drawn that collar into her capacious muff! It had disappeared, at all events. It might have been accidental-it was so, he at first believed; for surely, that nicely-attired lady, whom he knew moved in good society, and who was supplied generously with pin-money by her highly respected and liberal husband-could not be a thief. At night, he said to the clerk at the desk: "Charge Thief's Account' with one I think." lace collar-ten dollars;" for it had gone, and this was always the rule in such

And three days subsequently, having thought the matter over, quietly, and called to mind some cases of so called kleptomania, of which he had read and heard, he concluded that this must be an instance akin to that disease, which certain persons are afflicted with, and which Webster defines to be "a morbid and irresistible impulse or desire to

But my client was himself an industrious, honest young man, who was not overburdened with capital; and he could ill afford to thus lose his goods, or permit this style of genteel robbery to go on unchecked. So he said to his book-

When the clerk handed it to him, he "How much does it figure up?" "Rising two hundred dollars, sir."

"Is the last item charged—the lace collar?" "Yes, sir; ten dollars." "All right. I am going up-town, Quill. If any one calls for me, personally, say I shall be back in an hour." And, putting on his hat and overcoat, he disappeared. My client had never called at the house to which he was now destined, but he had a slight acquaintance with the gentleman who resided there. Mounting the stone steps, he rang gently, and was admitted.

"Is Mr. O—at home?"
"Yes, sir," said the servant, showing the merchant at once into the parlor, where, after shaking hands with the gentleman of the house, he was just about to open up his business with him, when he heard a light footfall, and immediately his wife entered the apartment, to accompany her husband down to dinner-where she was evidently asonished to meet the dry-goods dealer who as quickly observed that the lady he remembered had upon her neck his nissing ten-dollar lace collar!

"My wife, sir," said the gentleman, presenting her to my client, who said:
"Yes, sir—I have met the lady before." Then to her he added: "How do you like your new collar, madam?"

"The what, sir?" she replied, coolly. "Your new lace collar, madam. It is ery becoming, certainly."

A SCARED EDITOR

"Here's two dollars—send me your paper, for life." he said.

"You see." he went on, "our daughter was sick and like to die; she drooped and grew weak and pale, had headaches, no appetite, back ached, hands and feet like ice, couldn't sleep, hacked with cough, and we thought she had consumption.
